Milligan College hosts the "Race for Hope"

By TriCities Staff

More than 50 participants, walkers and runners, lined up for the "Race for Hope."

It's a first for Milligan and organizer Rachel Landry. She says the race supports the fight against human trafficking.

Rachel Landry is a senior at Milligan and say, "It's such a huge issue and as we started working on this and spreading the word, there's so little known about it. It's so prevalent overseas, but also here in the United States."

More than thirty volunteers helped landry direct traffic today. The race capped off Milligan's "Spiritual Renewal Week."
